HOW TO USE THIS SUPPLEMENT

Use this supplement to find minority aging related events at The Gerontological Society of America’s 70th Annual Scientific Meeting. Sessions included may not contain the words ethnic or minority, but each abstract has been carefully reviewed to determine whether or not there is minority content. Note this program supplement contains abstracts submitted and accepted through the regular process and does not include late breaker abstracts or changes made after July 1.

For the most up-to-date program information, download the mobile application for smartphones and tablets.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 14

8:00am-4:30pm | Republic B • Separate registration required.
Pre-Conference Workshop: Stress and Resilience: Concepts and Measures for Minority Aging Research
Chair: Anita Stewart
Faculty: Steven Wallace, Anthony Ong, Keith Whitfield, Irena Stepanikova, Jeanne Teresi, David Almeida, Tara Grunewald, Lis Nielsen
This workshop will describe the main approaches to defining and measuring stress and resilience, identify the value of including stress and resilience measures in minority aging research, discuss how to incorporate stress and resilience into research questions analysis and dissemination and explain sources of data and measurement tools on stress and resilience. The workshop will also include a breakout session, moderated by the speakers, where participants can discuss useful approaches for including stress measures in their own research. Because of the importance of standard self-report measures that can be broadly applied in disparities research, we focus primarily on self-report measures, although we will also discuss biomarkers as an alternative measurement approach.
Supported by grant R13AG023033 from NIH/National Institute on Aging (NIA).

The Gerontological Society of America (GSA) is the oldest and largest interdisciplinary scientific organization devoted to the advancement of gerontological research, learning, and practice.
Through the GSA Annual Scientific Meeting, nearly 4,000 international professionals in the field of aging take part in the opportunity to learn the latest trends and developments from industry leaders, build strategic partnerships to address aging challenges, and network with peers.
